

Mortgage Rates Barely Move

July 19, 2018

MCLEAN, Va., July 19, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Freddie Mac (OTCQB:FMCC) today released the results of its Primary Mortgage Market Survey[®] (PMMS[®]), showing that mortgage rates were once again mostly flat over the past week, inching backward slightly.

Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's chief economist, says mortgage rates moved sideways, primarily because of the mixed bag of economic data released this week. "Manufacturing output and consumer spending showed improvements, but construction activity was a disappointment," he said. "This meant there was no driving force to move mortgage rates in any meaningful way, which has been the theme in the last two months. That's good news for price sensitive home shoppers, given that this stability in borrowing costs allows them a little extra time to find the right home."

Added Khater, "Unfortunately, don't expect much relief from the tight inventory conditions plaguing many markets. As seen again last month, new home construction is not picking up to meet demand, and as a result, home prices are still rising at double the pace of income growth."
