

Mortgage Rates Drop Below Seven Percent

May 23, 2024

MCLEAN, Va., May 23, 2024 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Freddie Mac (OTCQB: FMCC) today released the results of its Primary Mortgage Market Survey[®] (PMMS[®]), showing the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage (FRM) averaged 6.94 percent.

"Spring homebuyers received an unexpected windfall this week, as mortgage rates fell below the seven percent threshold for the first time in over a month," said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's Chief Economist. "Although this week's data on previously owned home sales showed a decline, total inventory of both new and existing homes is up. Greater supply coupled with the recent downward trend in rates is an encouraging sign for the housing market."
